

The background of the image is a vibrant, out-of-focus display of bokeh lights in shades of yellow, green, and blue. In the lower portion, there is a dense layer of multi-colored confetti, including green, blue, pink, and gold pieces, which adds to the festive and celebratory atmosphere.

WHAT DO YOU DO FOR PROTECTING YOUR CULTURAL HERITAGE?

The time that has elapsed since the creation of an object or from the moment an event took place is very important because it influences the way we perceive things. The passage of time provides the perspective needed to give value to an object or a place.

Heritage is what our ancestors preserved, created and left as a legacy to their descendants to remind us of them and their lives.

The heritage represents us as individual, group, society, community.

To protect my heritages, I must be careful that they are not destroyed or damaged over time, because we might think that this cultural heritage is a thing of the past, static, it does not change. The truth is different: he is constantly changing and interacting with those who enrich him.

Heritages are very important, because they show us who we were and who we are. They define us as human beings, because without the past we could not have the present.

The list of Romanian heritages and places that are part of UNESCO is very long, because Romania has very beautiful places with a long past.

Some of them would be the Danube Delta, villages with Fortified Churches in Transylvania, historic town of Alba Iulia and another cities.

Andreea Popescu

I'm part of the school dance ensemble. We repeat to show at the contest the beauty of Romanian dance. Folk dance is a tradition of Romanian folklore for hundreds of years, which is preserved in modern times.

CHRISTMAS EVE

In the morning , on Christmas eve ,all the children go to carols. I'm going to announce the Birth of Christ. Those around him sing with them and rejoice. He also gives them a penny.

HOLIDAY HELP

A few days before CHRISTMAS or EASTER, people prepare their homes for this holiday. Some traditions they do:they clean the house, decorate it and cook traditional food. CHRISTMAS

Crina Dogaru

I protect my culture by respecting traditions. Our traditions are very different, but amazing.

Folk dances are very important in our culture being practiced by children and even adults. And Romanian music is very beautiful being sung by the most talented singers.

Saviana Macinic

1. I recommend people to visit old monuments that I also visited and keep their popularity alive so that they won't fall unknown

2. I visit old monuments and huge castles of all European Countries to see what others cultural heritage looks like and that makes me really happy because I get to see amazing statues of all time and famous castles.

3. I protect my cultural heritage by respecting it, not disrespecting by throwing litter all around them, keeping them clean so that people enjoy visiting.

4. I make posters with my friends that recommend the monuments and buildings from all the countries in this Erasmus+ Project

Stefan Panchiosu

The term “inheritance” is extremely broad, always attaching to the goal to which it refers to value, meaning, quality, integrity, authenticity, and, especially, it has been around for many generations.

Heritage brings us to the past, and in the present it is deeply related to the way in which we live.

We use the “past” as an unlimited resource, a source of reinvention and a social power. Although not all forms of inheritance are universally appreciated, heritage is appreciated as an essential source of personal and collective identity and necessary for a sense of self-respect.

Alexandra Popescu

Heritage is what our ancestors have preserved, created and left to them in order to remember them and their lives. It is a legacy passed down from one generation to another and we all participate in this continuous process because it offers value to at the individual level, and at the community level.

The rarity of a good or object increases its value. Our mission is to protect cultural heritage. Many of today's values will be part of the future heritage, which is why we are all responsible and must be actively involved in protecting cultural heritage.

All the inhabitants of a town, commune, village have an important role in heritage protection. we are all responsible for preserving them. Everyone mobilizes in groups or associations to raise awareness of public or private organizations and find solutions to improve. In conclusion, we must all bring help, no matter how small, to preserve these riches.

Rares Lungu

Last year, after a long time of pandemic period, our Erasmus+ meetings by 5 Heritages and 6 Inheritors resumed with 3 face to face project meetings with children: Turkey (February 2022), Italy (March 2022), Slovakia (May - June 2022). We also had 1 online meeting made by Romanian team (December 2021). It's was great international project! I believe talking to our colleagues from other countries and travelling around famous European places we could be more proud of our different nationality and learn how to protect and promote cultural heritage.

I visited Slovakia by our school's Erasmus+ team. We discovered Základná škola, Rovinka, the most popular monuments of Bratislava and really interesting tourist attractions. I presented some presentations about my country when we had online meeting made by Romania.

The cultural things (traditions, buildings, traditional songs etc.) are as different as the people and the pleasure of exploring new nationalities can't exist without cultural diversity.

I believe the best way of protecting cultural heritage is just to don't forget them long, long time in the future transmitting these to the next generation of kids
The last but not least, I hope we will have a project together with the same topic.

Robert Baba